

Can Faith and Unbelief Be Mixed?

I sure hope so or I'm in big trouble. Sometimes I find great encouragement in my Bible footnotes. I have to remember that those footnotes in my Bible are not inspired like the holy scriptures printed above them. Still they help.

For example, there's the gospel story where Jesus comes down from the glorious mountaintop transfiguration only to find everything in chaos. The disciples failed to heal a disturbed young boy. The boy is in torment, Jesus is exasperated, the disciples are embarrassed, the crowd is restless, and the boy's father is desperate. Here is what the dad says to Jesus:

"...if you can do anything, take pity on us and help us."
"If you can'?" said Jesus. "Everything is possible for one who believes."

Immediately the boy's father exclaimed,

"I do believe; help me overcome my unbelief!" (Mk 9:22-24).

The encouraging footnote suggests: "The question was not whether Jesus had the power to heal the boy but whether the father had the faith to believe it. A person who truly believes will set no limits on what God can do." And then this balancing statement: "Since faith is never perfect, belief and unbelief are often mixed."

That has been my experience as well. As I reach out to God, at times in desperation, I am deeply aware how inadequate my faith is. God knows this. Jesus knew this. Although he challenged the boy's father to have greater faith, his limitations did not limit the Lord's power. Jesus saw the pitiful condition of this boy, heard this father's desperate cry and healed his son.

Our flawed efforts aren't the focus, faith in God's power is. Yet our efforts show the content of our heart. Like everybody else there that day, Jesus saw the heart of this frantic father and responded. Prayer, pleading, desperation, outstretched arms, crying out—these are indications of what's inside. This is especially true in our private prayers where there is no one seeing us but God. In such moments, it is freeing to exclaim in prayer, "I do believe; help me overcome my unbelief!" You will be heard.
